

The visual arts today are seen merely as parlor amusements - except, perhaps, as part of one's investment "portfolio." How ironical that the likes of Van Gogh and Gauguin lived, suffered and died in order to provide coffee table art books for bourgeois living rooms.

